Hey Forbes:

Tom called me this afternoon. Some things were cleared up. I learned a few more things I didn't know. Tom's Mother passed away in December, and then the lawyer went on vacation, and doing the work for free, Tom has to "stand in line" for meetings. All combined, more time went by than was intended. I know how it is with the passing of our Moms. I think I did get across that we have to think now about several months down the road, and knowing that something is going to come to pass allows us to pencil in dates, but when we don't know, it is necessary to begin trying to fill a time slot. They are interested in restoring the Allosaurus. I mentioned that we may have some interested buyers. And that even if they put money in to restore it, and then decided they do not want to be the buyer, that we could sell it any way and all benefit. Also if we mold it we have it anyway.

I am content to wait on them.

Hope things will work out for all of us to the glory of God.

See you later.

Joe
